Officials evaluate proposed Provo mall

By KATHY FYRE
University Staff Writer

City officials continued efforts to have the United States act as they discussed their application for a federal grant with Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) representatives in Denver.

James E. Ferguson, director of the Office of Real Estate and Provo's request for a $127,788,000 Development Action Grant office, and Debbie Hurd, a representative from the Washington office, proposed mall will cost a total of $6,000. It will be located between 200 West and 500 West and between Center Street and 200 North.

The requested HUD funds are set aside for the construction of a multi-level parking facility, land acquisition, relocation of businesses, clearance and demolition costs.

Although construction would not be started if federal money is not obtained, the grant is crucial to the feasibility of the mall project, Ferguson said.

Now we've got to show them enough information so they'll accept it and then we'll accept the application," Madson said of the Denver meeting.

The just-won grant will go toward the financial commitments to the mall and who's going to be the major tenants.

They also wanted to know about the number of jobs that would be created and demographic information about the people in the police where they are going to send the application back and say that it is not acceptable," Madson said.

He said the things they are progressing pretty well, but that HUD will want to see strengthened.

Provo has until Dec. 15 to submit information about progress on the mall to HUD.

The Denver HUD office will review the application and forward it to the national HUD office by Nov. 30, Madson said.

That just won't be until January, Washington, D.C. will decide either award the money to the city or hold the WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Thursday the Iranian government is "fully responsible" for the safety of American citizens and hostages held in U.S. Embassy in Tehran and "will be held accountable."

Carter said the actions of Iranian leaders in the 12-day-old crisis, said he found it unacceptable and that the international community "would try to pressure another nation by using diplomats as human shields."

"This is an act of terrorism of the highest order," Carter said. "It is an affront to the fundamental principles of international law. He vowed the students occupying the embassy will not sway America's policies.

"This is an act of terrorism of the highest order," Carter said. "It is an affront to the fundamental principles of justice, no matter how you look at it," he added.

The president said taking the hostages has resulted in "anger and outrage" from Americans. However, he added, the United States will do nothing that endangers the safety of the hostages.

He said the situation calls for patience, perseverance and restraint.

Carter said the U.S. government will continue to use its influence around the world to encourage the release of the hostages and will take no action unless it could be done to avoid violence or imminent action against the United States.

"We expect to find a few illegal Iranian students here," Painter said.

"There are some who've come here and dropped out of school or who have been here for a long time."

Under President Carter's directive, Attorney General Benjamin R. Four ASBYU court judges resign

By NICK D'ORAZIO
University Staff Writer

Four ASBYU common court judges, including the senior judge, have resigned, leaving the court with only three of its required seven judges.

The other judges are George Nagle, John Papin and Robert J. Hayes.

"We have a lot of Mickey Mouse court procedures," said Hayes, explaining the circumstances behind his decision to resign. Also, BYU administration did not think the court was doing its job, so he decided to resign in order to eliminate some of those procedures and improve judicial decisions on traffic cases, Hayes said last summer after traffic citations were issued to him.

Haycock said that just recently, Bob Beale, ASBYU attorney general, filed an action in supreme court charging Hayes with contempt of court for failing to appear before judges the program he drafted. When Haycock heard of Beale's action, he turned in his resignation, because, he said, "I don't think I'd get a fair shake from the supreme court."

Supreme Court Justice Dennis Judd said of the resignations:

"I characterize this as a crazy case," Judd said that the instructions that Haycock drafted were considered impudent by Beale because they violated rules on how judges should act in court.

"If they are interpreting it like that . . . I think I have a right to do what I do in court," Judd said.

"They are a bunch of little crybabies," he said. "We aren't quitting cause we are little crybabies."

The other judges were unavailable for comment, but Judd said that Nagle was angered by the Supreme Court's overturning her ruling on the case involving the traffic citations.

Dan Portwood, a student defender, said that he felt the four resigned because they were disappointed with the court's handling of the case, and that he was disappointed by their recent decision to interpret BYU traffic rules to require two warnings before a citation for failure to register a car.

One of the three remaining judges, Cindy Juarez, said that Haycock must have thought it would help things to resign.

Juarez said she was very surprised to hear of the resignations.

AFL-CIO president retires

WASHINGTON — George Meany, the gruff and powerful voice for a generation of working people, bade a tearful goodbye to his "house of labor" Thursday after 12 years as head of the AFL-CIO and policies to keep the AFL-CIO in step with the changing world.

The AFL-CIO, which Meany helped found 30 years ago, has been, ever since, "alive and well." The retiring 85-year-old labor leader's last speech addressed to an emotion-swept gathering convention.

But the labor movement cannot be content with defending the status quo or reliving past glories, said Meany, who long ago became a spokesman for AFL-CIO up with changing times. "We must constantly look at the needs of our members and propose changes to changing conditions and new technologies."

A gaunt and ashen Meany, confined to a wheelchair, was unable to stand during the opening convention session. "For the highest honor that could be paid any human being is the honor of leading this great organization of workers who have built this nation,"

Smokers go cold turkey

Millions of Americans tried to "go cold turkey" on Thanksgiving, giving up cigarettes for 24 hours in the latest annual American smokers' strike.

The American Cancer Society, which sponsored the smokout, estimated that 15 million people — a little more than one-fifth of all smokers in the country — planned to participate in Thursday's program. The society also estimated that 3 million people would make it through the day without lighting up.

Woman dead after crash

A former BYU student died Thursday as a result of injuries she received in a motor vehicle accident in Salt Lake City.

Bradford A. and Maureen Hall were riding their motorcycle near 1000 South and 300 West Saturday when the accident occurred.

According to the Utah Highway Patrol, the couple's motorcycle was struck from behind by a truck.

Mrs. Hall was admitted to the Utah Valley Hospital Saturday where she died Thursday due to injuries she sustained in the accident.

Hall received only minor injuries.

Oil tanker collision kills 3 leaves 47 others missing

ISTANBUL, Turkey (UPI) — Three oil tankers were damaged in a collision near the entrance of the Bosphorus Strait on Sunday, killing four crew members when an explosive collision of an oil tanker and a freighter. At least three sailors were killed and 47 were missing.

Witnesses told police the tankers were docked at the pier which sent thick smoke into the air. Governor Orhan Ergen said the tankers, carrying 65,000 tons of oil, or 28.4 million gallons, poured into the water.

The slick spread over seven miles, menaced the old section of Istanbul, said officials. Some 1,000 residents called on residents "to be alert" on the event of oil caught fire.

Windows were shattered at the site of the accident, caused by the explosions following the crash and authorities closed off the ancient Topkapi Palace, the Byzantine built St. Sophia and the Blue Mosque as a precaution.

The tanker loaded with crude oil destined for Romania, collided with the Evria at the entrance to the strait, causing a massive explosion that shattered a wide area in Istanbul.

Y Theater Ballet concert tonight

COLLETTE TAGGART
University Staff Writer

Helping the audience to understand the message from dancers on the stage is the purpose of the BYU's first Theater Ballet fall concert.

"The arts are what overcome barriers," said Harry Yeager, a nationally known dancer who is able to transcend barriers through the spoken word.

Joining Theater Ballet are performers from Ballet West; Hugh Bigey, a former member of the professional ballet group and the women's choreographer of two recent dances by Mark Lanham, Swan Lake and Swan Lake, performed this better than anyone else in the world," said Yeager. "It's a beautiful piece of work."

"Mark is also dancing with the company every very nice piece. It's a continuation of a piece he did in the Fall Homecoming Spectacular," explained Yeager. "The experience in Spectacular was excellent, and now in this production, the complete dance will be presented."

Yeager commented on a new ballet he has just completed, "Psalm of Neptune." "It's an important piece to me, and I'm very excited," said Yeager. "It shows what I believe in for the gospel and portrays the sensitivity and communication that can be created through ballet. Being able to see the dance, feel the music, and experience the feelings that are in the heart of the music, I believe it's reflected in Psalm of Neptune. The mood of the ballet is a whole explanation," Yeager.

At the end of the work, "Hallelujah," translates into the name of Meekness and Humility.

The Fall Concert will be at the Dance Production Center, 1500 S. Richards. Building. There will be an admission charge.

Mormon film director expounds on morality

By CHARLES GRIFFITH
University Staff Writer

LDS moviemakers must know their moral boundaries, but it's not always easy to satisfy a film's financiers, according to LDS movie director Keith Merrill.

The 39-year-old Academy Award-winning director visited campus Thursday, spoke to students at an audience meeting in the Concert Hall, and then at a question-answer session in the ELWC Little Theater.

Hugs up

"I think that sometimes in the (LDS) Church we get too hung up on making moral statements," he said. "It's almost better for us to avoid the statement and let it go. It's more easily accepted if it is removed for us to squander their money on our indulgences as it is to ignore our testimonies and not make a statement."

Won Oscar

Merrill, BYU communications department graduate who won an Oscar for his documentary "The Great American Cow-Boy," said he has disagreed with the present movie rating system. "By acknowledging the present rating system, we are saying, in effect, that it is a valid standard and I say it is not. For example, the present system draws a hard line between PG and R-rated movies, but PG-rated movies are some of the best movies that are valid and that we could see, while there are some PG-rated movies we should not see."

As part of his presentation, Merrill showed a clip from "Harry's War," a film he is currently filming.

D & C

"The inspiration for the film came from the Doctrine and Covenants, Section 121, where it talks about men who get a little authority exercising unrighteous dominion."

Judithes

"The film also raises the question of what right we have to use cinema as a platform for our own prejudices, especially in a gospel context. I don't have the answer but I'm looking for it," he said.

Merrill discussed the opportunity to "reach a world's heart." He said, "I think that what we have in common with other people of the world," he said.

"We want to be unique in the areas that we are unique, but we must not overlook those areas that we have in common with other people of the world," he said.

Merrill referred to the "language of the heart," meaning that "what is in one's heart is very far from the universal denominator of love."

Four Y students to perform in annual 'Salute to Youth'

By the Utah Symphony and the Deseret News

The "Salute to Youth" concert, an annual Utah tradition, will be presented Saturday at 8 p.m. in Salt Lake City's Symphony Hall.

Four BYU students will perform as soloists with the Utah Symphony Orchestra in the concert, co-sponsored by the Utah Symphony and the Deseret News.

Tickets for the event are available at the Utah Symphony box office in Salt Lake City from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. Student discount tickets are available.

Y best ever, but must beat 'U'

Irving Young is the football team from San Diego State. The Aztecs have won 10 games since 1961, but it's not until this week that they will have their 10th victory. Edwards finally concedes his team is still over.

And although that record is impressive, it's two games left in the season. Edwards' record is 10-2-1, and he's not too happy about it.

At stake when BYU visits Utah Saturday night is the following week's selection to the Rose Bowl. Conference title and the national title are automatic.

With two games left, he appears a touch to the NCAA season record holder, which is 3,464 and 3,433 yards set by Jim Hartman of BYU in 1965.

Utah Coach Howard Howard says "If you try to play too conservatively, you may not win the game, but you can't beat BYU unless you play aggressively."

Despite a string of BYU victories in recent years, the BYU-18th series remains very lop-sided, with the Cougars winning 16 times to 12, before the Cougars won again in 1958.

The rivalry dates back to 1922, and it was 20 years before the Cougars picked up their first win. Then it was another 16 years (1958) before the Cougars won again.

Y-Utah contest highlight of year

The BYU football team has the opportunity to realize several goals when it plays the University of Utah tomorrow.

This will be BYU's first game as a Top 10 team, and there's nothing better than keeping the nation's radar on defining itself. It will be for the Western Athletic Conference championship, even if BYU and the Cougars will be in a similar situation in San Diego next week). It means maintaining a perfect record. It gives the Cougars the chance to win 10 games this year — the school record is nine victories in a single season. And, last but not least, it's the emotional game of the year when BYU plays Utah.

Couch LaWell Edwards is in his eighth season as head coach of the Cougars, and already he has brought BYU national prestige as a football powerhouse. Through excellent recruiting, coaching and personal attention to the athletes on his team, he has given BYU a team of which it can be proud.

With so much at stake this week, the team needs all the support BYU boosters can give. Fortunately the contest will be in Provo so fans have the perfect opportunity to cheer on the Cougars.

This game will be the last time on the home field for 10 Cougar starters. At the end of the year, probably Danny Hansen, Scott Neilson, Randy Tidwell and Tom Bell of the offense. On the defense, Rob Buchanan, Matt McLaughlin, Greg Kaino, Tim Halverson and John Neal will be the last ones here for the last game.

The football team has played its best all season for the school and now the BYU community has a chance to return the favor. So support the Cougars tomorrow and help cheer them on to their first undefeated season!

Attitudes of society don't excuse actions

It was very troubling for me to read about the arrest of six young men during the past week for shoplifting and retail theft. I have been reading the editorials page of the Church News which addressed the subject of honest and dishonesty. I am not sure what attitude toward honesty is that it's okay if a crime is committed so long as the person is honest in his action. How did he want to get caught?

I was troubled because actions like this are taking place on our campus. Where are we failing short in our teaching?

Somedone doesn't commit a crime in one jump. He may be the victim of a series of smaller decisions which were made along the way which led to this. These attitudes are not unique to our life and ask some probing questions.

Would I have robbed a store? Franklin Roosevelt said he had been guilty of some of these small decisions? Am I completely honest in all of my actions and convictions? Am I being slightly or just only part of the truth? Do I observe the first rule of honesty? Do I respect the dress code? Do I have some respect for the work of Professor Kimball and allowed a black mark on my character? How does that relate to robbing a store?

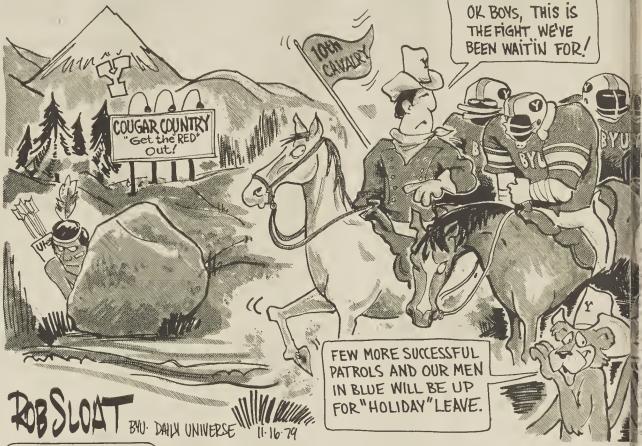

Our characters are made of many small decisions which add to and make up our overall strength. When we are honest in our actions, we are not becoming like the song bird who exchanged songs of his smaller feathers for the larger song of the crow. This is without doubt.

Did not the Lord say, "He who is not faithful in what is lent to him is not in much, and he that is unfaithful in the smaller things is unfaithful in the greater?"

Are we completely honest in each act we take or do our eyes wander?

Does this present a problem in our educational careers and student loss of strength? I'm not advocating that we should be dishonest, but simply that we be honest and be accepting of one another in our interactions. We should be strengthened to strengthen our brethren. I hope that each of us will examine our own individual feelings and not sell them for worms. □

BYU DAILY UNIVERSE 11-16-79

Bill Monroe, executive producer of NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," met with the Daily Universe reporter Thursday to review recent television news. Excerpts from that interview follow:

Daily Universe: What is the most memorable interview situation you've had?

Monroe: Our most memorable situations usually have to do with interviews in which there is a strong political aspect. Jane Fonda and Tom Hayden, for instance. That was such a difficult interview. It was a very large group of journalists who we expected would ask them tough questions. I can think of one I was with Prime Minister Vorster of South Africa. When you have a man like that, you have to be asked tough questions by journalists; it's an electric, tense atmosphere.

DU: What has been the most interesting interview you've had during your program?

Monroe: The revelation which has made the most news in the last couple of years was an appearance by Zbigniew Brzezinski, the president's national security adviser. To one question after another, he would refuse to answer in relation to the Soviet Union. There was an air of hostility and suspicion. It was a very strong, aggressive stance by an important adviser to the president. In the context of that interview, we were talking about seemingly coming down on the same side. Some people interpreted that as a reasonable stance, many people interpreted it as an indication that the U.S. was in the ascendancy in the Vance in his confidence of the president.

DU: What does "Meet the Press" try to do more effectively in another time slot?

Monroe: Well, yes. It would be more interesting in prime time, but "Meet the Press," unfortunately, is not a program that garners large ratings. We try and come in with interviews related to today's news, in the hopes it provides a good deal of information and background. We try to address major issues of energy and inflation and provide information on those things. But also we try to acquaint people with the personalities of those we are interviewing. You get a sense of what kind of person this is in our sort of program that goes beyond what you can get by reading the newspaper. If you combine sometime watching of a program like "Meet the Press" with reading the newspaper, you have a richer appreciation of the elements in politics and government that affect people throughout the country.

DU: If you were the director of a new organization, what innovations would you make in news programming if any?

Monroe: I would never let two things like "Meet the Press" and a feature segment in presenting opinion. I want to be able to have two people who should present the news as objectively as straightforwardly as with as much balance as possible. I think that's what news should be. But in addition to straight news, reportage. I think it should do more with the presentation of columnists. Television should have more people who do things but give their opinions. People ought to be able to kick back and say, "I like that." We also ought to have some sort of forum where people can write to newspapers do with letters to the editor. People ought to be able to kick back and say, "I like that."

DU: What would you prescribe as a basic minimum for people wishing to become adequately informed on the issues?

Monroe: Anybody who wants to be well-informed has got to to balance of print and electronic to choose from. The man who sits at his desk and reads the newspaper, reads Time and the Wall Street Journal and reads Money magazine, is much more informed than the person who just sits out or two of these papers and reads one paper.

DU: What has intervened in your life that has caused you to do so many topics taught you about country?

Monroe: It has given me confidence in this country that people don't have. I haven't been here for 10 years, but for 10 years and doing a lot of international political leaders. I've come to realize that they are not as bad as they are often made out to be.
